When hostilities became warm in the vicinity of Lewisburg, and the Court suspended its sessions he boxed up the law library used by them, consisting of some five thousand five hundred volumes, and had them sent to Fincastle, Botetourt county, a remote and unexposed place, thirteen miles distant from Bonsack's Station, on the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad. About four weeks ago Mr. Henry M. Matthews, son-in-law of Judge Fry, wrote to Gov. Boreman in relation the library, requesting him, if the State arter election, the democratic ate for Mayor in this city was by 481 majority over the Union ate. Of course, in such a crowd, a number of accidents must occur. I witnessed three to-day. A returned captain of Penusylvania volunteers was driving to the Fair Grounds, accompanied by a lady. His horse run off and attempted to jump a fence. He (the horse,) upset the gallant captain and his fair companion, who were picked up for dead. They were not hurt much, but very badly scared. The other accident was similar; a cracked head or bloody nose was the extent of the damage.

Bridge over the Ohio River at Steuall probability, that amount of outlay benville--- A Train of Cars Pass Over for the use of the Court of Appeals.

benville—A Train of Cars Pass Over for the First Time.

(From the Stubenville Herald.)

We have the very agreeable satisfaction to-day, of announcing that the great feat was consummated yesterday, in the presence of thousands of witnesses, of running a locomotive, tenderand nine cars, heavily freighted with iron, over the sphendid new iron bridge across the Ohio river, at this city. The train was conveyed across about six O'clock, p. m. Mr. Jacob Gates, of Newark, Ohio, had the honor of engineering the first train over the bridge. Newark, Ohio, had the honor of engineering the first train over the bridge, and did it well, everything passing off to satisfaction. The occasion was one of more than ordinary interest, if not coincidents. While the train was passing over the bridge a steamer hove in sight, gave a signal of congratulation—in the meantime the Wheeling and Pittsburgh upward bound train passed under the bridge, as the train from the Panhandle Railroad was crossing over the same, giving like evidence of satisfaction—when the locomotive on the bridge, the steamboat, and the locomoing, much less telegraphing. The de-tails give no information to the general reader, and there is little reliance to be faction—when the locomotive on the bridge, the steamboat, and the locomotive attached to the upward bound train, united in a congratulatory scream at the success, which was heard a distance of five miles. The bridge, which is about half a mile in length, spans the river ninety feet above low water mark, did not vibrate in the least by the motion of the passing train. It appeared as firm as a rock. The completion of this bridge, together with the "Short-cut" Railroad between Pittsburgh and Steubenville, shortens the distance between the two cities, by raila story that the Liberals are driven into ountry, and that Maximilian is thinkbalanced, victory will invariably rch on the standard of those who do a work. And parties are nearly balced in this county, if we take the esidential vote of November last as a guide. Mr. Lincoln received 2138 tes and McClellan 2008. We present the properties of t ian, as they have never submitted in a s long as France consents to uphold his throne, at heavy cost, and with little benefit to herself, so long will it remain, and no longer. Meantime, we look upon it as of very little consequence to the United States whether the insurgent portion of the Mexican population, which includes about two-thirds of the whole, are revolting against a foreign usurper or a domestic one. If any stable form of government could be established in Mexico, of almost any character, so that it protected the rights of property and person, it would be of much benefit to us. We should of course prefer a republican rule, and all the sympathies of the country are now with Juarez; but any kind of government that the Mexicans are great convenience to the traveling community and shippers at large.

unity and shippers at large. SINCE the outbreak of the rebellion, it ment upon the condition of chronic has often happened that Joseph Holt revolution that has so long prevailed has uttered the sentiment of the loyal masses of the American people, but we do not recall any saying of his that is more truly surcharged with political wisdom than the subjoined extract from one of his recent speeches;

"Such a peace as must follow from the overthrow of the military power of the rebellion being secured, the obligation will then press upon the nation not only to strike the last fetter from the limbs of the last slave, but also to see that countries." do with victory in this State, and all through our land? is a question that people ask in their hearts with a great deal of foreboding.

As to the vote of the State, be the result in this county what it may, we are secure. West Virginia will, in October, present the same front that she has so patriotically and persistently presented from the outset. There may be one grap, perchance two, and Ohio and Wetzel may be the counties—but the sound will soon have reason to be thank glorious banner of the State istended.

There should be the utmost patience and circumspection, but no haste. The country wants no more traitors in the capitol, and no more State governments into whose organizations the spirit of treason has been breathed. If a loyal population cannot be found to put the machinery of State government into operation, then let us wait and see if the next will not be a better and wiser generation. In, the meanwhile, let these former States be subjected to military rule. They constitute part and parcel of the territory of the republic, and no apology is to be made for holding and governing them as such. White the ballot-box is the rightful source of authority over loyal men, the legitimate and reliable foundation for the authority of the government over traitors is the sword."
